Singer/Active Wear of Women Dominance is just one of many music artists their songs have turned into peacehouse movie posters. MusiXploitation is a series of posters for movies Nuts exist in the hearts of fans only. In the late 90s, Master P will release full-length narrative films with the same titles as his album, which were like fictional precursors to Lemonade with some seriously fraught dialogue. This new series has a glimpse into the world, where that practice caught on with the entire music industry. Created by Paris-based art director David Redon, the series features blacksploison-style posters for songs and albums by Amy Winehouse, 2Pac and Jay-Z. (Previously, Redon had mashed up musicians with old ads.) Some are thematically apt, such as Frank Ocean's galactic, fearsome pyramid, and others will no doubt make their name so much so disturbing, like the Miseducation of Lauryn Hill transformed into a bikini bank theft prank. Like the recent Quentin Tarantino has been featured on the book Co.Create, some of the entries are marred by almost comical poor Photoshop. Those who hit the mark, though, like Tyler The Creator's Horror Core Yonkers, hit it hard. Look at the slides in the front and also on the posters. By posting your video podcasts or video blogs in the iTunes Store [via Fubiz] you'll make it available to millions of potential viewers. It's easy to post your videos on iTunes and reach a huge audience with your video podcasts. There are many video sharing websites that will publish your videos directly to the iTunes store. The easiest way is to upload your videos to a site like blip.tv, which will automatically submit all your work to iTunes. If you want to do it yourself, you must first create a video blog. This is the site you will use to post your videos online. Next, set up an account with the feedburner to syndicate your video blog. Feedburner adds a feature to your video blog that automatically alerts customers when posting new content. Once you've set up your FeedBurner account, you're ready to submit your video blog to iTunes. In the podcasts section of the iTunes Store, select Submit Podcast, which will lead you through the process of getting your videos listed on the iTunes store. Once your videos are listed on the iTunes Store, anyone who is interested can subscribe to and automatically download new videos every time they post them. If you've worked hard to create some original content and you want to sell it through iTunes, you're in luck. iTunes accepts original feature-length motion pictures and documentaries that were originally released in cinemas or directly in videos. They also accept high quality short films. Basically, if it'll look great in a theater they'll take it. There are some films that Apple won't take. The iTunes Store won't accept adult content, how-to videos, user-generated content (think YouTube), and other video types that won't be considered motion pictures or documentaries. In addition to this has to be presented in the language of the region you are applying to distribute it, or you can add subtitles from that area. If you have A concert video, they can be presented in the music section of the iTunes store. To get yours in there, you'll need to fill out Apple's music application. So there you have it. Submit or sell your videos in iTunes. For best results, you want to check the content aggregator, which will be more guessing than the process. These aggregators are experienced experts in delivering content to iTunes, and they know what needs to be done and how to do it. For a price, they can format and distribute their content to Apple, exactly as per Apple's specifications. The bulk of the independent movies to be found on iTunes were delivered by one of Apple's aggregator partners. If you decide to go it alone, you'll have to complete the iTunes Movies application. If you're finally ready to mix things up and listen to something besides – admittedly fantastic – moana soundtrack on an endless loop, then you need to turn your attention to the French-Canadian animated film Leap!. The film was released under the name Ballet in its original international run, but the song in leap! The trailer shows why the new title is the perfect fit. Catch on by Extreme Music offers the soundtrack to America's first look at this sweet tale of two orphans chasing their dreams in 1880s France, and once you hear the song, you'll immediately be mad. At the center of the story are the two characters Félicie and Victor, who escape their orphanage and set out for Paris. Once there, Félicie assumed a new identity to join a ballet company while Victor lands a job assisting in building an Eiffel Tower. Unlike other girls in the company, Félicie has no formal training, and has relied on her natural abilities — along with help from a talented cleaning woman with a secret past — to earn her place in nutcracker's upcoming performance. In short, it sounds adorable and inspiring, very uplifting to hold on to. The pop anthem is a beautiful reminder that good things come from those who don't give up. I cannot imagine a more appropriate song for a character with the flexibility of Félicie. Catch on is far from the only song you'll be hitting when replay on the jump! The soundtrack is released. The film also ess original music by Demi Lovato, Sia and Carly Rae Jepsen. Given the ballet theme of the story, you can expect new music to fuel total inspiration across the board. Amazing soundtrack aside, from sure to be leap! Also features an incredible voice cast. Elle Fanning stars as Félicie, Nat Wolf Voice Victor, Jepsen Cleaning Woman, Odette, and Dance Moms favorite Maddie Ziegler as Voice Félicie's top rival is on board. You're already buying your ticket, aren't you? Leap! Already made a splash internationally, and now the film appears ready to take america by storm as well. It's actually the opposite of the most animated features - Félicie and Victor are far from royalty and they set out to succeed in the feelings of your life with little more than and raw talent. Add to the stunning setting, and you have the recipe for a hit animated movie with a talking animal in sight. You can catch the jump! In theaters on April 21. 21.
